

It's the thought that counts

Tough economic times means that average Valentine's Day spending is expected to decline 17 percent this year. We will be giving less candy, jewelry and clothing and sending more cards instead, the National Retail Federation says.

What we give

